The summer past, what drawns are over!
The income of the air hall fied;
Whe cathete of the golden meadows
Are torn by tempests, chred by shred;
The rose hall tost its fragrance,
The lift hangs for head,
Distincted.

Soundware in the earth and ether,
Sobs and murmurs buil divine;
Blasts beyond man's pure power
Bock the branchesed for pline;
Yet one west thought bloquada
Throught the corner time—
The Thy heart is mine;
And mine thine!

Shout yo winds and thunders!
Pour your floods of gloom!
All must end in senshine!
That is still your doom.
When the madens May and April,
in their wordant loom,
Weave bud and bloom.

So, through wild November, And December's more, I will dream of beauty, Till the violete blow; And, should pain beset up, In this worki below, Thou art near, I know— I know—I know—

The Unique Fashions of Robemia The Prague correspondent of the New York Times says:

York Times says:

Many hundred years ago, there was a Queen usined Libussa, who lived in Prague, and in point of fact is said to have founded it. She was a famous Amazon, and as the historians affirm that she was also a priestess, I have no doubt that she wore Turkish trowsers and made awfully long speeches at the Women's Right Conventions of those days. Her moral character was not irrepreachable—in fact, it was rather bad. She was—not to put to fine a point on it—a little too fond of the men, falling in love with all the good-looking fellows of the neighborhood, and inviting them up to her castle with the greatest possible affability. Being, as I have said, a priestess, she had the marriage service nice and sang at her finger's end, and many a poor fellow, thinking he had jumped into a good thing of it, vowed and promised at her request, to love, henor and obey that very fascinating but unprincipled felmale. For a few weeks things went on pleasantly, and Libussa's husband began to stretch his legs out comfortably in the great breakfasting hall, and so count who he should have for boon companions in the long winter nights. Ha! who indeed? Little did he think that at that moment, Libussa was arranging the mater for him. In dee time winter nights. Ha! who indeed? Little did he think that at that moment, Libussa was arranging the matter for him. In due time the honeymoon came to an end, and it was simultaneously discovered, if I am not mistaken, that the lady had a temper. She became sulky over her coffee, and made jeering remarks to her partner, causing that gentlemen to dash his newspaper to the ground, pull on his boots in a rage, and rush down town without eating a morsel of breakfast. Then matters became worse, until one fast. Then matters became worse, until one morning, after an unusual storm, madame pulled the bell and told the lackeys to clear pulled the bell and told the lackeys to clear away the things. Whereupon, four stont fellows, remarkable for the handsome developement of the lower leg, and smelling heavily of beer, stepped forward with a knowing wink, and seizing the astonished hubband, cleared him away also, by heaving him out of the window, where, after falling through a disagreeable amount of space, he reached the bottom of a river, and joined an illustrious army of predecessors.

Libussa, it is to be presumed, selected the most becoming meurning, and it is certain soon succeeded in getting another lover, who, when he became a little stale, was served in the same outrageous way. Ha! How wonderfully the times have changed since then. There is probably not a woman in the world, in this present Nineteenth century, who would treat her husband so century, who would treat her husband so shamefully, even if she could do so with impunity. Do you think there is? I am sure I don't.

At any sate this is the veracious origin of what is called the "Bohemian fashion," a feature of municipal government which has, as I have before remarked, become famous. as I have before remarked, become famous. In 1419, the townspeople, being dissatisfied with the Mayor and Common Council, broke into the City Hall and pitched them out of the windows one after another. To break their fall, a number of kindly citizens prepared a bed of pikes, upon which the unfortunate officials were received. The same exploit was repeated in 1483, and again a few years later; indeed, it seems to have been an implied part of the Bohemian Constitution, that when the citizens were tired of their rulers, they might—happy people—throw them out of windows.

Kins Me For It-A Woman's Return for

Risa Me For It—A Woman's Return for Kindness.

Passing through Grand-street, New York, one afternoon, on my way to the Metropolitan, I saw, says the Boston Evening Transcript, before me a little girl standing tip-toe upon the steps of an old wooden house, and ineffectually striving with both hands to turn the door knob. She was about nine years of age, plainly dressed, and with rather a pretty, but decidedly dirty face. As I came up, she greeted me with, "Here, mister, please open this door." I complied with her request, and had regained the walk, when she cried out, "Here mister, come back; come kies me for it." It was in vain that I assured the young madam that come back; come kies me for it." It was in vain that I assured the young madam that she was perfectly welcome to the little service I had rendered; she insisted peremptorily, at the same time putting out her pretty, dirty bill, and my gallantry demanding the sacrifice, I kissed her for it. This was some years ago; and since then I have goodnaturedly done both men and women favors, who, by the way they requited me, would seem to think I ought to have kissed them for it, too. When, though tired with my day's tramping, I tender my comfortable seat in the car to some well dressed lady, I am not astonished that she does not acknowledge the civility; I am only surprised she edge the civility; I am only surprised she does not ask me to kiss her for it.

When I am bound to New York, and some

When I am bound to New York, and some friend has requested me to take his daughter or sister in charge, I am not disappointed at not finding her ready, and that our coach is too late to the depot; but I wonder why she does not ask me to kies her for it. When through a second attempt we reach the city, and with much less of time I see her to her destination. I am not vexed at her forgetting to refund the money I have paid for her destination. I am not vexed at her forgetting to refund the money I have paid for her destination. I am not vexed at her forgetting to refund the money I have paid for her destination I am not vexed to her forgetting to refund the money I have paid for her ficket supper and coach fare; I am only astonished she does not ask me to kiss her for it. When I lend a lady a valuable book, belonging to a set, I am perfectly agreeable to its being returned with its back broken, and with other unmistakable signs of its having heen the baby's plaything or when she returns in a dilapidated state my newly purchased silk umbrella, I accept her apology, but am surprised she does not add, come kiss me for it.

When I oblige a lady, and put six postage stamps on as many California letters; buy a silk dress and send it by express to her daughter or aunt; loan her ten dollars until a next week," or "next morning." I am not vexed at her not making good my disbursements; I only wonder that she does not ask me to him her for it. me to kiss her for it.

When, after I have waited upon the wide w Herris, as I now have, for over two years; when, after I had taken her again and again to "the Museum," "the Academy," and "the Howard;" when, after I have danced, and sung, and played chess with her, so often; when after I have read "Paulide," and "Juliet," and "Werter," through and through with her; when, after I may done all these, and many other things is would be hardly fair to mention, I am not much surprised or hurt to see her occasionally firting with Jones, or Smith, or Brown; I only wonder—will she take the hint—it is leap year—she does not say, "Poor man, all your troubles shall now cease; come kiss me for it."

Time-bills are quiet at 10@12 per cent, usually the latter rate, for sixty and ninety-day Drafts on the East and South.

During the week ending last evening business improved, with a larger movement in Money, and a material reduction in its bal-ances. The offerings at the Discount-houses augmented, and more caution is displayed than there was last week as to the quality of the Paper taken. The Bankers have as much Paper now as they desire to accept. The market is tending to closeness, and operators in Third-street expect a stringency as soon as the packing season is

In regard to Provisions and Hogs on Tues-day, yesterday's Louisville Courier obvased and is seen for sugar-in the market.

The market for Hogs remains stagnant, with a few small lots offering at $5 00000 75 net for heavy Hogs, but packers are unwilling to buy. The only trans-action that we heard of to-day was a lot of 100 head at $6.50 net, on four months time. A large number of Hogs purchased for early November delicety, will arrive during the present week, and most of our arrive during the present week, and most of our arrive during the present week, and most of our gackers expect to have a number in pease by Thursday, and the slaughtsring season will be so by Thursday, and the slaughtsring season will be made to the same to the same to the same to the present money. Fart of the packers were in operation to day, and some 1,530 head were slaughtered. Huffman, bunden & Co. Killed sof, Hamilton & Brother 300 head, and Hamilton, Ricketta & Co., of Jeffersonville, to head. The number left over in pens this evening is about stop head, which will be slaughtered to morrow, if the weather should prove favorable. In addition to the houses killing, Jarvis & Co. have in pens some 760 head.

Tuesday's New York papers thus speak of Monday's Stock market:

Monday's Stock market:

The raule in the Stock market continued to day, and cash stock came out freely under the "scare" and the using up of margins. We think the decline to-day was due rather to the sudden stringency in the Broney market than to the political illustrates, as, if any thing, the alarm in regard to the results of the action of the South has decreased the results of the action of the South has decreased rather than increased. The difficulty, however, of carrying Stocks on call is much greater than it was last week, as lenders appear disposed to watch the progress of even's awhice and hold on to their funds. The commission houses have a fair amount of orders for cash, and could have much larger on time if the stocks could be benght at a fair difference. There was but little disposition shows by the bears to put out their options, and it is supposed that nearly all the prominent bears have covered their short lines. A very marked feature of the list to-day is the large proportion of shares soid for cash, indicating the calling in of leans and the difficulty partise having Stocks falling due on contracts find in taking them up. Between the Boards the market was dull and generally lower; and at the Signal due in the same features. In the street, after the second session, there was a botter fagiling in some description; it was feverels and excited.
